A Safe Verdict.

A packing case which contained a Peruvian mummy, intended for a museum in Ghent, was recently opened by mistake at an English railway station, thereby causing the authorities no end of trouble. Murder was at first suspected, but the coroner's jury disposed of the case in quick order, rendering this unique verdict: "That the woman was found dead at the railway goods station, Sun street, and did die on some date unknown, in some foreign country, probably South America, from some cause unknown. No proofs of a violent death are found, and the body has been dried and buried in some foreign manner, probably sun dried and cave buried, and the jurors are satisfied that this body does not show any recent crime in this country, and that the deceased was unknown and about 25 years of age."

STARTLING TALE.

American Prisoners in the Philippines' Hands Shamefully Abused.

The Spanish Prisoners Had Also Been Treated Very Badly, Even Worse Than the Americans, Many Dying of Disease.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—The Bulletin publishes a startling story from the Philippines, regarding Lieut. Gilmore and the party from the Yorktown who were captured by the Filipinos and who have been reported from official sources as being well cared for and well treated.

It appears that when the Americans reached San Isidor, where the Yorktown members and some soldiers and civilians had been imprisoned, they found the names of the prisoners scratched on the walls of the jail. Some letters from the men were found secreted under stones and a Spaniard who had been intrusted with several, presented them to Gen. Lawton.

The letters told of the hardships the men were compelled to suffer, and begged that aid be sent them. The men complained that they had been starved, beaten and bound, and moreover, were in rags. One of the letters signed by Albert Lowenson said that the Spaniards had been treated very badly, worse than the Americans, and that hundreds were dying of dysentery and other diseases, and that the government took no notice of the sickness prevailing.

In his letter Lowenson, who was formerly of the steamship Zealandia, gave the list of prisoners held by the Filipinos as follows:

Prisoners from Yorktown: J. C. Gilmore, U. S. N.; W. Wilson, C. O.; M. P. Vandevli, S. M. M.; W. Ellsworth, C. O.; M. Swain, S. E. Edwards, S. E. D.; S. E. Brissoloz, O. G.; A. P. Warson, apprentice; F. Anderson, landsman; captured at Baler, April 11; A. Dorree, E. Honneman, Nevada cavalry, captured January 30; A. Bishop, 3d artillery, April 12; H. H. Huber, hospital corps, and J. O'Brien, civilian, January 27.

TRANSVAAL SITUATION.

Question of Neutrality and Care of Our Interests in That Locality Not Yet Taken Up by Our Government.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The situation in the Transvaal is regarded by officials here as critical. Thus far however, the state department has not received a word from any source concerning the strained condition of affairs and there is no disposition to take up such questions of neutrality and the care of our interests in that locality unless the war issue is actually framed. Charles Macrum is the United States consul stationed at Pretoria. He has sent a number of reports dealing with commercial affairs, but has not touched on the delicate political conditions existing.

The United States also has a consular agent, J. H. Manlon, at Johannesburg, but he has not been heard from since he was appointed. There have been recent press reports from Johannesburg that a colored blacksmith, claiming to be an American, had been roughly handled by the field cornets, and that he had raised the question of his American citizenship, and had appealed to the American representative. The state department has been expecting to hear from Mr. Manlon on this case, but nothing has come.

Adm. Hoison's return will probably shed much light on the condition of affairs in the Boer country, and the extent of American interests, for while the Chicago was in South African waters the admiral spent much time at Pretoria and Johannesburg. The admiral has as yet made no report of his movements.

GUNBOAT NEWPORT.

Another Very Satisfactory Trial of the Vessel Made—She Makes Slightly Over Eight Knots an Hour.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Another very satisfactory trial of the gunboat Newport had been made. After the Newport had been a year and a half in commission and seven months out of dry dock, in a run of 156 hours she made slightly over eight knots an hour with a coal consumption a slightly over 11 tons per day. As her bunkers hold 232 tons of coal this indicates a steaming radius of 19 days, or 3,722 knots. The Newport, like the other gunboats of her class, is copper bottomed, and her efficiency is not impaired by remaining long in the water. This test of the Newport's capacity conforms very closely to the results obtained in other ships of her type, which include the Vicksburg, Annapolis, Marietta, Princeton and Wheeling. Each is of a thousand tons displacement.

Vessels Overdue.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 16.—The steamer City of Augusta, reported sailed from New York Saturday and due here Monday night, has not arrived. The Decatur H. Miller, from Baltimore, is also a day overdue. Some uneasiness is felt.

Recruits for Manila.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 16.—The transport Senator sailed for Manila Tuesday with 700 officers and recruits and a signal corps. There was very little excitement over her departure.

JOHN R. GENTRY WON.

The Little Bay Stallion is Still King of the Light Harness Racers—Time 2:03 1-2; 2:04 1-4—Searchlight Third.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The little bay stallion John R. Gentry is still king of the light harness racers. At the Rochester Driving park, Wednesday afternoon, the three greatest racing stallions of the American turf, John R. Gentry, 2:00 3/4; Joe Patchen, 2:01 1/4, and Searchlight, 2:04 1/4, waged a battle royal for the supremacy. The attendance was 8,000. The track was very fast, and, although there was a slight breeze down the home stretch, it did not seem to hold the racers as they turned into the stretch and headed for the wire.

The first heat was the best of the race. The owner of Patchen, W. S. Haws, at the last moment decided to drive in place of Dickerson. The scoring was prompt and at the fourth attempt the horses started to pace the race of their lives.

At the quarter Gentry was a length and a half behind, while Patchen and Searchlight were on even terms. The leaders held the same position when the half mile pole was reached and Gentry had dropped back another length and a half. All three were driving at the three quarters, but it was not until the stretch was entered that the mass of cheering and wildly excited spectators saw coming out of a cloud of dust in the rear of the leaders, who were pacing like a team, a flash of hoofs and the steel gray cap and coat of Billy Andrews, who, with a masterly hand, guided his magnificent charge to the outside of the track and shot to the front like a meteor. Faster and faster, with every fraction of a second seemingly gaining greater speed as they came on toward the wire, moved the flying sulkeys until the gap was closed. A hundred yards from the wire Patchen went in the air and Searchlight's driver began to use the whip. Andrews drove steadily, leaning far forward as if to help his horse, and the little stallion, with a mighty rush, passed under the wire a neck and a trifle more to the good.

In the second and deciding heat, Searchlight acted badly a few lengths after the start and broke often, the race narrowing down to Gentry and Patchen. It was a close battle the whole distance till the stretch was reached. Then Gentry forged ahead with comparative ease and won by nearly a length and a half. Time: 2:03 3/4; 2:04 1/4.

After the race was over, W. H. Harrison, officiating, announced that he was ready to match Searchlight against Gentry for $10,000, the race to take place at any time within the present week.

A TALE OF TORTURE.

There Were Few Dry Eyes in the Audience During the Recital of Dreyfus' sufferings in Prison.

RENNES, Aug. 17.—During Tuesday morning's session of the Dreyfus court-martial most of the time was occupied by M. Lebon, minister of the colonies for the greater part of the time that Dreyfus was on the Isle du Diable. Lebon has been accused of being responsible for the torture to which the prisoner was subjected.

M. Lebon testified that there was no needless severity shown. He was obliged, he said, to resort to extraordinary measures because of the danger of the prisoner being rescued.

Lebon's testimony ended in a string of excuses and lame apologies to Dreyfus. When he had concluded the prisoner was asked if he wished to question the witness.

"No," replied Dreyfus, "I have nothing to say to the man who for five years helped to make my sufferings agonizing and barbarous. I am not here to complain, but to defend my honor."

The recorder of the court then read from the detailed government reports of the prisoner while on Devil's Island. He quoted heart-rendering appeals and complaints made by Dreyfus because he received no letters from his wife or word of his children.

Women in the audience wept as the recorder read, and when he concluded there were few dry eyes in the court. Dreyfus listened with drawn face. Lebon's face was a study in uneasiness as the recorder read.

Prof. Hench Is Dead.

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—Prof. George Hench, of Ann Arbor, Mich., who was injured by a fall from a bicycle at Franconia, N. H., Saturday, and who was brought to Boston city hospital Tuesday, suffering from a fractured skull, died at that institution just before noon Wednesday. Prof. Hench was an instructor in the University of Michigan, and was passing his vacation in the White mountains.

Glanders Breaks Out.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Aug. 17.—Glanders has broken out among the government mules and horses at Ft. Leavenworth intended for service in the Philippines, and there is much consternation among the army officers over the disease.

Three Emperors to Meet.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—Early in October the Emperors of Russia, Germany and Austria will meet at Skierniewice, in Poland where the czar has arranged a hunt on a grand scale.

TO RULE SAMOA.

Three Powers to Appoint the Governor and a Council of Three.

The Powers Reserve the Right to Alter or Invalidate Laws Enacted by the Legislature—Chief Justice Is to Be Elected.

BERLIN, Aug. 16.—The Kolnische Zeitung publishes what is described as the substance of the report of the Samoan commission. According to this abstract the future government of the Samoan islands is to consist of a governor and a council of three members to be elected by the three powers, Germany, United States and Great Britain. The commission favors the nomination of a European ruler as governor. The governor will nominate all officials and have power to punish or pardon state offenders. His signature will be necessary in the enactment of laws.

The legislature will consist of the governor and council, three members forming a quorum, and the governor having a casting vote.

The powers reserve to themselves the right to alter or invalidate laws enacted by the legislature.

The governor will annually convene an assembly of natives to deal with domestic affairs. This body will sit at Mulunui, but not longer than a month. Its decisions will be liable to revision. The chief justice is to be elected. He must be a "man of probity, versed in law and equity." His salary shall be $5,000.

All decrees of the legislature must have received the consent of three members of the native assembly, composed of the governors of the different districts.

The chief justice, or some other official nominated by the governor, shall preside over deliberations of the assembly, but without a vote.

On all questions within his jurisdiction, the decisions of the chief justice shall be final but the three powers reserve the right to modify or revoke decisions on political or constitutional questions or matters of international law.

Disputes between Samoa and any of the treaty powers are not to be regarded as causes of war, but are to be submitted to the chief justice.

The high court of justice will have cognizance in the first and final instance of all questions arising out of the interpretation of the treaty, and of all questions concerning real property, and foreigners and crimes against life. It shall also act as a court of appeal.

None of these provisions will interfere with the jurisdiction of the council regarding ships and sailors of their own nationality. The right of habeas corpus can only be suspended during a state of actual war.

The salary of the governor or administrator, shall be $6,000.

RELIEF OF PORTO RICANS.

Committee of the Merchants' Association of New York Enlarged—Gov. Roosevelt Accepts Chairmanship.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—A committee of the Merchants' association, to co-operation with the Colonial society for aiding Porto Ricans, formed before the recent hurricane, has been enlarged in accordance with the suggestion of Secretary of War Root, who favors effective committee organization in New York for assisting the Porto Ricans. Gov. Roosevelt has accepted the chairmanship of the enlarged committee. The subscriptions received by the Merchants' association now amount to $4,030. Clothing and medicine are very much needed. The Merchants' association has already sent down 14 cases of goods.

THE TROUBLE SETTLED.

All South Side Brick Yards at Chicago, Resume Work After an Enforced Idleness of Three Weeks.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—After an enforced idleness of three weeks all the south side brick yards resumed work Wednesday in accordance with an agreement drawn up Tuesday between representatives of the manufacturers and a committee from the strikers. The workmen secure no new concessions and return to work under precisely the same conditions that they left them. While President Carroll of the building trades council will not concede that the strike was lost, he confesses that he is unable to mention any material gain.

The Storm at Wilmington, N. C.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Aug. 16.—Up to 10 o'clock Tuesday night the highest velocity of wind was 30 miles per hour, but the local weather bureau forecasted the arrival of a storm of much greater proportions within a few hours.

Blocked by Ice Floes.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 16.—The mail steamer Labrador, from Labrador, which arrived here Tuesday, reports that the entire coast is blocked by ice floes from the northern extremity south to the Straits of Belle Isle. She reached this port five days behind her usual time. Such a condition is unprecedented in the history of the northern waters. It will not only seriously injure the cod fishing industries, but greatly increases the difficulties for ocean steamers making the passage by way of the straits.

FIVE WOMEN ASSAULTED.

Four Suspects Have Been Arrested—The Outrages Occurred in the Suburbs of Little Rock.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 17.—Five brutal assaults by a Negro man on white women have occurred in Little Rock in the past 24 hours. It is generally believed that all these crimes were committed by the same Negro, but three suspects have been arrested, and if the right man can be positively identified he may receive summary punishment. The victims of the assaults are all highly respected white women of this city. Their names are: Mrs. Belle Aiken, 2114 Chester street; Mrs. Milton Young, 2401 State street; Mrs. Kennedy, Fourteenth and Jones street; Miss Emma Longcoy, 1420 Booker street; a young lady at Twentieth and Cross streets.

All of the assaults occurred in the suburbs of the city. The first was that of Mrs. Aiken, which occurred Tuesday afternoon. As Mrs. Aiken was passing Twentieth first and High streets the Negro seized her and dragged her to the woods. She resisted and cried for help. A passerby frightened the Negro away after he had severely beaten his victim. Officers at once began a search for the assailant but failed to find him.

At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, a few blocks from the scene of the first crime, Mrs. Young was assaulted in almost the same manner. The Negro knocked her down with such force that a rib was broken, causing internal injuries of a serious nature. He choked and beat her about the head and on the side inflicting very serious injuries. The Negro finally seized her purse and disappeared in the woods. Mrs. Young, who is a frail woman, is in a precarious condition from her wounds and the shock. Her clothing was torn almost entirely off in the struggle.

An hour later Mrs. Kennedy was attacked at her home near West End park. She was knocked down, beaten and choked. Her children ran for assistance and the Negro fled. Mrs. Kennedy's injuries are very painful.

About 11 o'clock Emma Longcoy, the 11-year-old daughter of a grocer, was attacked and beaten by a Negro half a dozen blocks from West End park. She escaped from her assailant. City and county officers, together with a large number of citizens, were by this time scouring the vicinity for the Negro. The greatest excitement prevailed and the anger of the citizens in the neighborhood was thoroughly aroused.

The fifth assault occurred early Wednesday morning on a well known young lady at Twentieth and Cross streets. She was likewise knocked down and badly beaten. Her face was badly swollen and disfigured from the effects of the blows.

These outrages were brought to the attention of Gov. Jones and he at once offered a reward of $100 each for the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties.

Four Negroes have been arrested as suspects and lodged in jail. They all answer the description of some of the victims. They are Ed Wright, Joe Gardner, Will Morgan and James Randle. Wright has been positively identified by Mrs. Kennedy as the man who assaulted her. As soon as darkness fell men began flocking toward the vicinity of the jail, and by 10 o'clock fully 2,000 were on the streets.

About 11:30 o'clock an attempt was made to storm the jail. The leader of the mob was arrested by Sheriff Kavanaugh on a charge of inciting a riot and lodged in jail.

Yaqui Indians Routed.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 17.—The latest information from the federal troops under command of Gen. Torres is that they encountered the Yaqui Indians on the left bank of the river between Potam and Medano. By a successful flank movement Gen. Torres surprised the rebels at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and routed them. The Indians made but a weak resistance and soon dispersed in the forest along the river, being hotly pursued. They left seven killed and a large number wounded. The loss to the federal troops was one killed and one death from sunstroke.

Wireless Telegraphy.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Signor Marconi, in his experiments with the wireless telegraphy at Dover Wednesday, met with complete success, the messages passing through several miles of cliff upon which Dover castle stands and 12 miles across the sea.

Starts for the Cape.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Lieut. Gen. Sir Frederick Walker, who relieves Gen. Sir William Francis Butler, as commander of the British troops in South Africa, started Wednesday for the Cape.

Death of Gustave Charles Kienbusch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Gustave Charles Kienbusch, a wealthy tobacco merchant, known as "Baron" Kienbusch, died Wednesday, aged 49 years. He was born in Tennessee, formerly lived in Cincinnati, and the body will be taken to that city for interment.

Selling Firearms to Alaskans.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The secretary of the interior has begun to grant permits under the new Alaskan code to persons and firms to sell firearms to the natives of Alaska.

WHITECAPPING.

Gov. McSweeney Asked to Assist in Suppressing It.

Negro Houses Were Visited by White Caps and the Inmates Taken Out and Whipped—Many of Them Are in a State of Terror.

GREENWOOD, S. C., Aug. 16.—The sheriff of this county Tuesday appealed to Gov. McSweeney for aid to assist him in suppressing whitecap outrages which began here a week ago. Tuesday night the governor sent word that he would be in Greenwood Wednesday with Attorney General Bellingier to make a personal investigation of the situation.

For more than a week a gang of so called whitecaps have been whipping Negroes in this county nearly every night. The section between Greenwood and Phoenix is largely tenanted by Negroes who rent from white landlords. It was at Phoenix, in this county thickly settled by Negroes, that the election riot between blacks and whites took place last November.

Since then among lower classes of whites there has been an unrelenting disposition to drive out the Negroes. Certain white men here, it is said, desire to get control of the valuable lands thereabout, and in order to do so they have set about to drive out the Negroes.

Monday night one week ago the whipping began. Negro houses were visited and the inmates taken out and beaten. Several nights last week this performance was repeated, and a wide territory has been covered in this manner by the whitecappers. The Negroes are said to be in a state of terror, and many spend the nights in the woods and swamps, while others seek the protection of their white landlords. On Saturday night 200 Negroes spent the night in Greenwood, and many of them have never returned to their homes. So far as known none have left the county. The better class of whites deplore the state of affairs.

The Negroes are afraid to give information, and certain white men have been threatened if they take action against the white capper. Senator Tillman and Congressman Lattimer, of this district, are both here attending the wheat growers' convention, and it is believed they will assist the governor in his investigation of the matter.

THREE GREAT PACERS.

John R. Gentry, Joe Patchen and Searchlight to Race at Rochester—All the Horses in Good Form.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The three greatest pacers John R. Gentry (2:00 3/4), Joe Patchen (2:01 1/4) and Searchlight (2:04 1/4) are now waiting the call of the starter's bell and barring accidents each will be ready to go the race of his life Wednesday afternoon. Gentry never looked better and his trainer and driver, W. J. Andrews expects him to go a mile better than two minutes, this season, if not within the next 24 hours. Patchen is also in great form. On Sunday he went the last quarter mile in 29 1/2 seconds, a 1:55 gait.

Searchlight, the youngest member of the trio, has demonstrated his fitness to compete for the crown, and his owner is very confident.

AN ANGRY BEAR.

He Mangled a Woman and the Husband Killed the Bear—Consternation in a Camp of Strollers.

XENIA, O., Aug. 16.—A performing bear caused consternation in a camp of strolling men and women near this city Tuesday. One of the women started to feed it when it grabbed her, and, in the struggle that ensued, her clothing was almost torn entirely from her person and she was badly scratched up. Her husband, named Saltare, came to her rescue and knocked the bear over with a club. It came at him again and he hit it with a sledge hammer and killed it. The carcass was dressed for food.

McKinley Will Visit Pittsburgh.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 16.—A committee consisting of Gov. Stone, of Pennsylvania, Robert Pitcairn and E. M. Bigelow, of Pittsburgh, arrived here Tuesday to invite President McKinley to the reception to be tendered the 10th Pennsylvania regiment in Pittsburgh upon the return home from the Philippines, August 28. The president accepted the invitation and will leave here Saturday evening, August 26, arriving in Pittsburgh Sunday evening, August 27. ## PLIGHT OF A BASHFUL MAN.

He Would Have Gone If He Could Have Summoned Up Courage to Ask for His Hat.

"I always was a bashful sort of a fellow when I was young," said Ananias Fisher, as he passed his plate for the third piece of pie. He was dining out with friends and wished them to understand his temperament.

"But I was broken of that habit before I was 25. It was either a case of get over it or stay all night, and I got over it," he said, as his plate was returned with a good sized piece of pie such as Topeka housekeepers make. "I was calling, out on Fillmore street, and when I went in I forgot all about putting my hat on the rack in the hall, and carried it into the parlor with me. I put it on a sofa, and when the lady of the house came in she said 'how-dye-do' and sat her 280 pounds down on that hat."

"I beg your pardon, I said."

"Why, what's the matter?" she asked, for I guess I looked kind of bewildered.

"O, nothing," I answered. "I just got a stitch in my heart."

"We went on talking, and I thought that when she got up I could sneak that hat, but she talked and talked."

"I got along to nine o'clock, and I knew I ought to go, but I was too bashful to say anything, so I just waited. Then the clock struck ten, and I knew I was staying too long, but I could not get that hat."

"Is it moonlight?" asked the 280-pound lady.

"I said it was, and knew she wanted me to go, but I did not have the nerve to ask for that hat. Just as the clock struck 12 she blurted out: 'Why don't you go?'"

"I will if you will give me that hat," I said.

"What hat?"

"My hat."

"Where is it?"

"You are sitting on it."

"Me?" and she jumped up.

"These was my hat, and it looked much sat upon, but no more than that woman. I have never been bashful since then."—Burlington Hawkeye.

A FAIR DEMONSTRATION.

They Were Satisfied the Thing Could Be Done, But by Some One Else.

Mark Twain and his friend, Rev. Joseph H. Twichell, once planned a bicycle ride from Hartford, Conn. (their home), to Boston, and wrote beforehand, to an acquaintance in the latter city, telling him their line of route and what time he might expect to see them arrive. The appointed time was an ideal one for a long run, and the two friends started quite early in the morning. But neither of them was accustomed to long rides, so after 12 or 15 miles had been ridden, it became apparent that each of the riders was waiting for the other to say something. Finally Twain said, as they came in sight of the railway station in a small town they had entered: "Let's take the train the rest of the way."

Of course Mr. Twichell agreed, and so the acquaintance in Boston was surprised by seeing the two friends walk up to his door about one o'clock in the afternoon. He had not expected them till evening, but he greeted them warmly, and addressing Mr. Twichell, said: "Well, you made pretty good time, didn't you?"

"Oh, fairly good time for novices," was the reply.

"What time did you leave Hartford?" he asked of Mr. Clemens.

"About seven a. m."

"What, you don't mean to say that you have ridden all the way from Hartford to Boston on your bicycles?"

"No," replied Mark Twain, "but we rode far enough to demonstrate that it could be done."—Detroit Free Press.

Pain Conquered; Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 92,649]

"I feel it my duty to write and thank you for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. It is the only medicine I have found that has done me any good. Before taking your medicine, I was all run down, tired all the time, no appetite, pains in my back and bearing down pains and a great sufferer during menstruation. After taking two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I am now on my fourth bottle and all my pains have left me. I feel better than I have felt for three years and would recommend your Compound to every suffering woman. I hope this letter will help others to find a cure for their troubles."—MRS. ## A Full Ticket Named.

Delegates from one hundred and ten counties—men outspoken for Bryan and silver, but opposed to Senator Goebel's candidacy for Governor—assembled in convention Wednesday at Lexington and nominated a full state ticket, besides adopting resolutions declaring for Bryan and the Chicago platform, and denouncing the Goebel election law, the Louisville convention and its methods, scoring the President's policy toward the trusts, and favoring amendments to the Chinn school book bill and the McChord railroad bill.

The delegates were largely composed of farmers, merchants and other representative men, and the convention was reported as a fine assembly of men.

Speeches were made by ex-Gov. Brown, Hon. W. C. Owens, Theodore Hallam, Phil B. Thompson, Judge John Green, Capt. W. H. Sweeney, Rev. J. H. Overstreet.

The convention was notable for the earnestness of the vast crowd.

The following ticket was named, the nominations being made by acclamation:

Governor John Young Brown, of Jefferson.

Lieutenant Governor—P. P. Johnston, of Fayette.

Attorney General—Lawrence P. Tanner, of Daviess.

Auditor—Frank A. Pastner, of Caldwell.

Treasurer—John C. Droege, of Kenton.

Secretary of State—E. L. Hines, of Warren.

Superintendent Public Instruction—Rev. E. O. Guerrant, of Montgomery.

Commissioner of Agriculture—B. W. Vandever, of Lincoln.

Horace Collins, the well known dry goods merchant, recently figured in probably the funniest street incident that has occurred in Paris this year. Seeing a dog with an inflated paper sack tied to its tail, tearing frantically towards him, Mr. Collins lifted his left foot to let the dog pass but the canine, expecting a kick, swerved and struck Mr. Collins' right foot. The momentum of the dog upset Mr. Collins and he sat on the inflated paper sack causing it to burst with a loud report. Both he and the canine were much surprised at the outcome of the incident, and the dog hasn't stopped running yet.

A Mutual Surprise

My Dear Daughter—I have long felt how much my home and children needed a mother's love and care. I have been willing in this respect, as in every other, to sacrifice my own feelings to their good, but it is not an easy matter to find just the right person to fill so important a position, and I do not wish to act hastily. A few weeks ago I was introduced to a widow lady of the name of Norton, finding her, on further acquaintance, to be all that I could desire, either as a companion or a mother to my children. She is a most kind and excellent lady, and I trust that you will be prepared to extend to her that respect and affection that are her due. She has one son, who is away at school, which will be pleasant for you, as you have no brother. We shall be home Thursday. Your affectionate father,

HOWARD LESLIE.

P. S.—You were very wise in not engaging yourself without consulting me to the young man you mention. A young girl like you don't know what love is. Five years hence will be time enough for you to think of such a thing.

This was the letter that Annie Leslie received from her father in reply to the one she had written him, overflowing with the glad anticipations to which her newborn love had given rise.

For a time she sat speechless with anger and amazement.

The idea of her father ever marrying again had never once entered her mind.

Why should he? Was she not there to keep house for him? And when she left, as, of course, she should in time, would not Marion then be ready to take her place? She never heard of anything so ridiculous.

And to think that her poor mother, who had been hardly two years in her grave, should be so soon forgotten!

If she thought that her adored Charles Edward would ever be so false to her memory, she was sure that it would break her heart.

But the postscript was the kindest cut of all. The slighting manner in which her father alluded to "the young man," whose name she had written to him in full—Charles Edward FitzHenry Stubbs—was more wounding than the harshest invective.

And to presume to think that she knew nothing of love, who had experienced it in sweetness and power!

Full of these indignant thoughts, Anne sat down and penned an epistle to her adored Charles Edward, detailing her grievances and ending with the declaration that she would never, never submit to be dominated over by a stepmother and that she would ever be true to the first and only love of her life.

The next mail brought a reply, stating, together with many protestations of undying affection, "that he could truly sympathize with her feelings, in view of her father's marriage, having just received the intelligence that his mother was to take another husband. She had given him one stepfather when he was a boy, and he would never submit to the rule of another."

He would be there on Thursday, to demand in person her hand of her father. If he refused, they would fly together to some happy place where cruel fathers and stepfathers were unknown.

Charles Edward was as good as his word. Promptly on the following Thursday he made his appearance at the house of the father of his adored Anne.

Scarcely were the first rapturous greetings over when the sound of carriage wheels was heard.

Anne turned pale.

"They have come!" she cried, starting to her feet.

"Let 'em come," responded Charles Edward defiantly. "You are not afraid, I hope, when I am here?"

As he said this curiosity impelled him to turn his eyes to the window.

"Good heavens!" he ejaculated as they fell upon a lady who was lighting from a carriage. "Why, it looks like—but, no, it can't be!"

Mr. Leslie led his wife up to where his daughter was standing.

As Mrs. Leslie turned from the constrained greeting of her new daughter her eyes fell upon the young man back of her, who stood staring at her in speechless amazement.

"Why, Charles?"

"Why, mother?"

"I never thought of seeing you here!"

"Nor I you!"

"Who is this?" inquired Mr. Leslie, looking in bewilderment from one to the other.

"It is Charles Edward that I wrote you about," said Anne, blushing.

"It is my son Charles," said Mrs. Leslie. "Charles, this is your stepfather."

"And my future father-in-law, I trust," responded Charles Edward as he shook hands with his mother's new husband.

"We'll see about that, my boy," said Mr. Leslie, laughing. "If your mother is willing, I shall have no objection."

The four passed a very pleasant evening. Charles Edward voted his stepfather to be one of the nicest men he ever met, and Anne thought no lady could be more agreeable than her new mother.

Charles Edward remained at home a week and then went back to school, taking with him the assurance that if he studied diligently and both he and Anne were of the same mind at the end of the year no opposition would be made to their marriage.—New York News.

Mother's Friend

is not a chance remedy. Its good effects are readily experienced by all expectant mothers who use it. Years ago it passed the experimental stage. While it always shortens labor and lessens the pains of delivery, it is also of the greatest benefit during the earlier months of pregnancy. Morning sickness and nervousness are readily overcome, and the liniment relaxes the strained muscles, permitting them to expand without causing distress. Mother's Friend gives great recuperative power to the mother, and her recovery is sure and rapid. Danger from rising and falling breasts is done away with completely.

AN IDOL OF CLAY.

What did she give for her wedding-ring?
All that a woman may!
What did she give for the giver bring?
Only an idol of clay.
All the sweet dreams of her girlishhood
Years.
All that a heart could hold;
All of her hopes and all of her fears;
All of her smiles and all of her tears.
For one little circle of gold.

Told she the world of the bitter cheer?
Ah, no! With a smiling face
She eluded her idol from head to feet.
With the garments of her grace.
And no one knew of the tears she wept;
Her griefs that were never guessed.
For hid in her heart of hearts she kept
Her thorns of woe. And so she slept
With her hands across her breast.

CHAPTER III.

MME. D'ENTRANQUES.

Walking down the Via San Domenico, I turned to the right by the Dorgo di San Vito, and here I was recognized and hailed. Pressing hurriedly forward, and aided opportunely by the passage of a body of men at arms, coming through the street in a direction opposite to that of my followers, I succeeded in shaking off my tormentors, and turning again to the right up a narrow street, entered a barber's shop to have my beard removed in order to disguise myself as far as possible. The barber, a fussy little fellow, placed before me a mirror of polished steel, and as he set to work stropping a razor on the palm of his hand, I removed my cap, and for the first time observed that the hair of my head was thickly streaked with gray.

"Your excellency has doubtless come to join the army," said the barber, in a tone of inquiry, as he drew his razor across my face.

"Ah, yes, yes; I have just come," I replied, and the little man went on:

"There have been great doings to-day. This said the duke has ordered the Count di Savelli to be executed for having in his possession a favor of Madame. They say the Count stole it, but you know better, don't you, your excellency?" and the little fool chuckled to himself. He went on without waiting for an answer. "Ah, yes; the ladies can never resist us soldiers. I may tell you that I served with Don Carlo Baglioni, and can hear my pike—there now, I think that side is clean shaven—as I was saying before, it was hard on the Marquis di Savelli; a gallant noble when I frequently saw—pardon your excellency, it is but a scratch after all—had you not moved so suddenly, still only a scratch, nothing for a soldier. The Marquis di Savelli, as I said, was a regular customer of mine, and he had a lovely head of hair, your excellency. It was not so much before I took him in hand. Ecco! but in a month you should have seen! He came in here in his free, easy way, and flung me ten crowns. Buy a ribbon for Madonna Giulia with that, Messer Pazzi," says he, "and harkee, send me over six more bottles of your chablis of St. Symmachus. Maledetto!" he exclaimed, twisting his curls between his fingers, "but she adores me now." Now who, I say, could she have been but—techie? Diavolo! it is done; never a cleaner shave in Rome itself. If your excellency's fortune grows as well as your hair, I could wish you no better luck."

I rose in silence, and, flinging him a crown, bade him pay himself, and, receiving my change, hurried out, declining all Messer Pazzi's entreaties to bear with me a bottle of his precious elixir of St. Symmachus or any other accursed balsam. I saw at a glance that the removal of my beard caused a considerable alteration in my appearance, and imagined if I could but change my attire my most intimate friends would not know me unless they observed closely; and even then might perhaps fail to recognize me. This view, as it turned out, was not quite correct, and I had yet to learn how difficult a thing it is to arrange a complete disguise.

A few doors further on I laid out some of my money in the purchase of a stout leather buff coat, a long, dark mantle, and a cap to match. The cap was ornamented with a single black feather; and when I had donned these garments I felt that, wrapped in the cloak, with the cap pulled well over my eyes, and the feather standing defiantly out to the side, I wanted but a fathom of sword to make myself as ruffianly-looking a bravo as ever trod the purlieus of Naples or Rome. But the sword was some difficulty, for my crowns had dwindled to 16. Fortunately I had on my finger a sapphire ring, and this I pledged for 20 crowns, and made my way to the armorer's. I there selected a strong, straight weapon, with a plain cross handle and a cutting blade, such as would be useful for rough work, and, after some haggling, got it for ten pieces. The armorer assured me that it was a sound blade, and I may say it did me good service. It now hangs in my bedchamber, a little chipped, it is true, but as bright and as fit for use as the day I paid for it, with a heavy heart, in Don Piero's shop, near the gate of St. Lawrence in Arezzo.

I began now to feel the want of food, for beyond the cup of Chianti brought to me by the under officer I had tasted nothing since yesterday evening, and therefore stepped into an ordinary called for a flagon of wine and a prey. Whilst engaged in assailing these, I saw a dozen men, whom I recognized as belonging to the garrison, entered the hotel, but to my joy I saw I was not known to them, and after a casual glance at me they fell to eating their meal.

I was, however, perforce compelled to listen to their conversation, which was carried on in the loud tone men of their class affect, and found to my annoyance that they were discussing me, and the events of the day. In order to escape this I was about to rise, when I heard one of them mention D'Entranques' name, and stopped to listen.

"He has left for Florence, and, it is said, intends to offer his sword to the Signory," said one.

"And the other?"

"Heaven knows! Perhaps Braccio's arm has reached him, poor devil!"

"Well, he was a good soldier and a stout fellow."

"Basta!" said the first speaker. "What does a little lightness of finger matter? Play it in a small way, you're a thief, and food for Messer Braccio, curse him! Play it on a big scale and you're a prince. I for one don't think the loss of Di Savelli because perhaps his hand at cards was always too good, and he made that little error in the matter of the rubies. A gentleman is sometimes driven to hard straits. I was a gentleman once and ought to know. I give you a toast—here's to a long sword and a light hand!"

They drank with acclamation, and then set to a-dicing. I had, however, heard enough, and settling my account with the host, stepped forth into the street, intending to depart from the town by the Porta S. Spirito or Roman gate, leaving the camp over my shoulder, and to make my way to Florence as soon as possible. There I would meet D'Entranques, and kill him like a mad dog. I ground my teeth with rage when I thought I had no horse, nor even the means to purchase one, and must trudge like any contadino. But, if I had to crawl on my hands and knees, I was determined to reach Florence and D'Entranques.

It was, however, not yet sundown, and my idea was to leave the city when it was well dusk to avoid all possible chance of recognition. I meant to have passed the interval in the inn; but, as I felt this was impossible, it was necessary to find another spot where I could lay in quiet. With this end in view I crossed the Piazza di Popolo in an easterly direction, and went on until I came to the Franciscan church, into which I entered, not, I am sorry to say, with any desire for devotion, but merely because I was less likely to be disturbed there than anywhere else I could imagine. I was right, in so far that on entering the church I found, as I thought, empty, but on looking round I saw beneath the newly-completed wheel window, the work of Guillaume de Mar-selle, a kneeling figure, apparently absorbed in prayer. I had approached quite close before I became aware that I was not alone, and was about to turn away, when, perhaps startled by the sound of my footfalls on the marble pavement, the person rose hurriedly and looked towards me. It was Mme. D'Entranques. Her glance met mine for a second as that of a stranger, but as I was moving away some trick of gesture, or perhaps the hot anger in my eyes, told her who I was, for, calling my name, she came towards me with outstretched hands.

"Di Savelli," she said, for I made no advance, "do you not know me?"

"Madame," I bowed, "I am unfit to touch you."

"No, no—a thousand times no! It is I who am unworthy."

I still remained silent, and she asked, with a passionate emphasis:

"Man, you have never sinned?"

The words struck me like a shot. I felt in a moment I had no right to stand in judgment.

"God knows," I replied, "I have, and I have been punished."

With that she took hold of my hand, and then suddenly burst into tears, weeping over me with words I cannot repeat. It was not for me to fling reproaches, and I softened and did what I could to appease her.

"I could not help it," she said; "I was not strong enough to speak or to let you speak. Oh, you do not know what such a thing is to a woman!"

"Let it pass, Madame. What is dead is dead."

"I cannot. And yet, what can I do?" Her tears began afresh.

In a little time she grew better, and I seized the opportunity to point out the danger she ran of being seen speaking to me, and suggested that she should make her way home. It was impossible to escort her myself, but would I walk a little way behind, keep her in sight, as I see she came to no harm. I urged this all the more as I saw it was growing late, and that she was without any attendants and far from the camp.

"You mistake," she said; "I have not far to go. In fact, I am at present the guest of the convent here."

"And—?" I did not finish the sentence, but she understood. I had forced myself to ask, to hear, if possible, confirmation of D'Entranques' movements.

"He," she answered—"he has left the army and gone towards Florence."

"And you?"

"I stay here for the present."

Her tone more than her words convinced me that she had been abandoned by D'Entranques, and it added another mark to my secret against him.

"Why should I not tell you?" she continued. "After, when it was all over, the duke struck his name off the army, and he left in an hour. Before he went, he came and told me all, laughing at your ruin. I did not know man could be so vile. God help me—it is my husband I speak of! He offered to take me with him, but I refused; and he left, mocking like a devil, with words I cannot repeat. He was not done with you or with me, he said, as he went. I came here at once, and perhaps when Mme. de la Tremouille returns to France I shall be enabled to go with her in her train."

"Excuse my asking it," I said, "but have you—?"

"Oh, yes," she smiled, sadly, "it is not that in any way."

At this moment I looked up and saw that it was sunset. Through the wheel window the orange beams streamed in a long banner, and lit up the figure of the saint above us. The rays fell on Madame's pale face, and shed with fire the gold of her hair. We ad before each other in a dead silence.

"Good-by," I said, extending my hand.

She placed her own in it and our eyes met. It was a moment of danger to both. Leger as I was, I had but to lift my hand, but to say a word, and here was one who would have followed me like a dog. I felt her weakness in her look, in the touch of her hand, which shivered as it lay in mine like a captive bird. At once a fire leapt up within me. I had lost—everything. Why not throw revenge after my losses, and with her by my side seek a new fortune with a new name? The Grand Turk needed soldiers, and what mattered it whether it was cross or crescent that I served?

But the woman became strong as I grew weak.

"Get!" she said, faintly.

I dropped her hand, and, turning without a word, strode down the aisle. As I reached the church door the bells of the Angelus rang out, and yielding to a sudden impulse I looked back.

Madame was on her knees before the saint.

CHAPTER IV.

A FOOL'S CAP AND A SORE HEART.

I was not so dense as to fail to grasp the extent of the peril I had escaped, or to fully realize the evil strength of the temptation, which came upon me as suddenly as a sneeze. It is rare in matters of this kind for wicked thoughts to be of slow growth; they spring at once to life, full-armed. I thanked God in my heart that I was able to sweep aside the base desire, which covered my soul like a black cloud, and refrained from taking advantage of Madame's momentary weakness. I could not but see I was to blame myself, I, the elder and the stronger, should have foreseen the probable consequences of a friendship such as ours, and my sorrow for her was mixed with the deepest regret for my part in the transaction. I banished all idea of attacking D'Entranques through his wife, wondering at the littleness of spirit which had ever conceived such a thought. If it were possible, I would have kicked myself. Perhaps such victory as I gained over my heart was due to the secret springs of my vanity being touched, to the fear of the loss of my self-respect, and this, mingling with my pity and regret, gave me the strength to win at the moment of temptation. It is difficult to tell; I have lived long enough in the world to know that the mysteries of the heart will remain veiled to the end. Occasionally we may lift the curtain a little, but more no man has done.

What happened, however, explained clearly to me the motive for D'Entranques' conduct. He, at any rate, must have seen, long before either of us, how affairs stood with the wife whose life he embittered; but he made no effort to save her, contenting himself with striking an assassin's blow, which had taken from him the last shred of respect Madame may have felt for him, and which had in that stroke been successful. Be this as it may, his stroke was successful, in that to all intents and purposes it had utterly blasted me. I was worse than dead. I was no ordinary revenge. In those troublous times, a blow from a dagger could have easily rid him from a wife of whom he was sick, or a man whom he hated, and no one would have thrown the matter in his teeth. But with devilish cruelty, he inflicted wounds which could never heal, and left his victim to live. It was impossible to hit such a man back, in a way to make him feel to the utmost extent the agony he had administered; the only thing was to take from him his worthless life; this he doubtless valued most of all things; and I meant to deprive him of it, if he stood at the altar of Christ. Armed by such thoughts, and with my cloak drawn well over the lower part of my face, I hastened towards the Roman gate, reaching it just as it was to be closed for the night. In fact, as I passed out, the huge doors came together behind me with a groaning, and at the same time I heard the dull boom of the evening gun from the camp, followed immediately by the distant peals of the trumpets of the cavalry brigade.

As the crow flies, Florence was but a few leagues distant; but I obviously would have to journey by side paths, over hill and across valley to avoid observation, and this would occupy at least two days, unless my travels were permanently stopped by my being cut off by a privateering party from the camp, or by any other untoward accident. Neither contingency was unlikely, for the writ of the king ran barely a league from the army, and the country was full of banditti.

In this mind I pressed on, intending to lie at Bucine for the night, or, if no better accommodation offered, to sleep as a soldier should, wrapped in my cloak, with the sky for a roof. As I went on, I found I was relying a little too much on my knowledge of the road, and a blue mist, which rose from the ground, made it impossible to pick my way by landmarks. The moon, come out by this time, shone fitfully through the bank of clouds, which was shifting uneasily overhead, and the wind, rising steadily, marked a ruin. I stirred myself all the faster, for I was in no mind to add a wotting to my misfortunes, and a drop or two of rain that caught me showed I had but little leisure to lose. I made out a narrow cattle track, and hurried along this; but before I covered a mile the moon was obscured, and the wind dropped. It now began to rain, and the darkness was so thick, that I could only just follow the road. Soon the track died away into nothing, and I found myself floundering, over my ankles in mud, and up to the waist in wet rushes. At any moment I might strike a quicksand, with which these marshes abound, so I used my sword as a search-pole, stepping only where I found foothold, a dozen inches or so below the surface of the bog. In this perplexity, imagine my relief to see the blaze of a fire shoot up beyond a small rising ground before me, and throw an arc of light into the darkness, against which the falling rain glittered like fine wires of silver. I shouted aloud and to my joy got an answer.

"Who is there? What is the matter?"

"A traveler," I replied, "who has lost his way in this cursed swamp. Wherever you are, you will make a friend and find a reward if you lead me out of this."

"Come straight on, there is no danger beyond getting your feet wet."

"They are that already," I answered, and pressed on, having absolutely to force my way through the wet rushes, which wound themselves around me impeding my progress terribly. Moreover, so sticky was the slime below that I thought every moment it would pull the boots off my feet. Struggling in this manner for a hundred yards or more, guided by the fire, and an occasional shout from my unknown friend, I at last touched hard ground, and with a "Thank heaven!" got out of the swamp, and found myself at the foot of the hillock, behind which the fire was blazing.

"Which way to Bucine?" I called out.

"Are you out of the swamp?"

"Yes."

"Then come round the shoulder of the hill to your right, and follow your nose. You will find shelter here. Bucine you could never reach to-night, and a dog should not be out in this weather."

"True, friend," I muttered, and with a loud "thanks" to the apparently hospitable unknown, I followed his directions, and, rounding the hillock, saw before me, spluttering in the rain, a huge fire of pine logs, at the entrance to a hut of the rudest description. Inside, I perceived a sitting figure, over which the light from the fire alternately cast a glare and then left it in darkness. I made my way to the open door, which hung back on hinges of rope, and entered without further ceremony.

"Humph!" snorted my host, without moving from his position. "I said it was no night for a dog to be out, I did not say anything of a wolf."

This change of tone was not so surprising, for, dripping wet, covered with mud, and white with fatigue, my general appearance was but little calculated to reassure anyone. Yet, as I hung my cloak on a rough wooden peg which caught my eye, I could not help laughing in mockery as I answered:

"Wolves, friend, come to wolves' lairs."

He took no notice of my remark; but, pointing to a heap of rushes opposite to him, said: "Sit down there." He then rose, and went toward the fire with an unlit torch in his hand. This gave me some opportunity of observing him. I saw he was of spare, but elastic figure. His head was bare, and his white hair hung in matted locks over a lean neck to his shoulders. His dress was fantastic and entirely out of place to his surroundings. It consisted of a tight-fitting jerkin of parti-colored velvet, with puffed breeches to match, pulled over thick black hose. On his feet were the ordinary sandals of the peasantry, and, as he stopped to light the torch wood, I saw his face was seamed with wrinkles, and that his lips moved rapidly, as if he was speaking, although no sound issued from them. He did not delay about his business; but hastened in, and, sticking a torch in a hole in the floor between us, resumed his seat, and said, abruptly:

"Let me look at you?"

Apparently his scrutiny was satisfactory, and I did nothing to interrupt him.

"Hungry?"

"No. All that I ask is to be allowed to rest here till to-morrow."

"That is well, for I have no food to offer you; but here is some wine in this skin."

He reached to a corner and pulled out a small wine skin. This he placed before me with the single word "drink."

"No, thanks." The whole manner and aspect of the man were so peculiar, that, although I was much fatigued, I judged it prudent to decline. His quick eye seemed to read my thoughts, for he laughed a little bitterly as he said:

"Tush, man! There is no fear. You bear too long a sword to have a purse worth the picking, and you are not supping," a look of hate passed over his features as he dropped out slowly, "with the foreign. See, I will give you a toast—'Heaven!'" He took a pull at the skin and flung it to me.

"I drink to that," I said, tasting the wine in my turn. Here then was another who, like me, sought for consolation in vengeance.

A striking incident which aptly illustrates the French Character.

Speaking of French politics, I heard a most extraordinary story of another strange secret of contemporary life. Some years ago one might see in a restaurant at night, playing dominoes quietly or conversing in tranquil tones, a gentleman named Levy. He was a man who knew more of the secret history of the courts of Europe than any man of his time. To get a full account of his personality and history you must spend an evening with "Joe" Lyons, the owner of the Trocadero and a score of other restaurants, one of the most brilliant raconteurs as well as one of the best fellows in all London. Mr. Levy was a private detective, employed whenever a task of extreme delicacy and enormous importance was on hand. He was retained by the Bank of England, among other institutions, and I have heard that his services were esteemed so valuable that he got the magnificent salary of £10,000 a year from that institution.

Well, just after the downfall of the Commune, Mr. Levy was entrusted with one of the most delicate and I might say terrible missions in his life. There were several communist refugees in London. Levy tracked them out. A man of his word, without enthusiasm, acquainted with all the seamy side of life and of men, he yet had a broad, sympathetic imagination; and he was astounded by the picture he found in the miserable den—if I remember rightly it was a stable—in which he discovered the objects of his search. These men, who but a few weeks before had the government and the revenues of the great city of Paris at their command, were engaged in making a wretched bowl of soup, which was to be the one meal—and the one meal of them all—for 24 hours. Not one penny had stuck to their palms of all the millions that were at their mercy! "These men may be madmen," he said to a friend to whom he told the story, "but, according to their lights, they are patriots!"

His wonder grew as they refused scornfully to surrender some papers which had fallen into their possession, in spite of dazzling offers of gold, which, as agent of the French government, he was authorized to offer them. They knew the horror and the terrible and appalling importance of the domestic secret in the life of a great man of which they held proofs, but they decided to keep the proofs until they thought it right or wrong to publish the story to the world. And, though they refused the gold, they never told the secret, and France and Europe were saved one of the most cruel and devastating scandals of our times.—N. Y. Herald.

Why the Light Went Out.

In front of the high altar in the cathedral at Salzburg there is a great lamp that is supposed to burn "forever and a day." One morning, years ago, worshippers were surprised to see it go out, and this was repeated morning after morning, always about the same time. It was thought the attendant had neglected to give it sufficient oil, and though he declared his innocence he was told that he would be discharged if the oversight were repeated. Unwilling to deal unjustly with the man, the dean of the cathedral hid himself one night to see if he could solve the mystery. He had not long to wait. About ten o'clock a big rat was seen descending the rope by which the lamp was suspended. Having reached the oil, it fed freely and then went away by the way it came. Needless is it to say that the attendant held his place.—Detroit Free Press.

A Sharp Retort.

It was after the publication of the "Lives of the Poets" that Dr. Farr, being engaged to dine with Sir Joshua Reynolds, mentioned that on his way there he had seen a clever caricature of Dr. Johnson being flogged around Parnassus by the nine muses. The admirers of Gray and others, who thought their favorites harshly treated in the "Lives," were laughing at Farr's account, when Dr. Johnson was announced. Sir Joshua introduced Dr. Farr, and to his infinite embarrassment repeated the story. Johnson turned to Farr and said: "Sir, I am very glad to hear this. I hope the day will never arrive when I shall neither be the object of ridicule nor calumny, for then I shall be neglected and forgotten."—Detroit Free Press.

NEW WATERING DEVICE.

Very Useful Where Cows and Other Farm Animals Have to Be Watered in the Stalls.

The cut shows a device for watering stock in the stalls. A V-shaped trough extends along before the whole row of stalls, forming, with its cover, the front of the crib. This trough can be flushed out, the lower end then stopped and the trough filled. The covers can be arranged so that the cattle can lift them when desiring to drink, then falling back into place of their own weight. A very little slope to the trough will carry the water from one end to the other. Until one has tried the experiment of keeping water constantly before his cows, thus giving them the chance to drink whenever thirsty—just as is the case when the animals are at pasture—he will not realize how much better his stock will thrive and produce flesh or milk than is the case when the stock is watered but once, or at most, twice, a day. In the latter case, if an animal does not happen to be thirsty at watering time, it must go until the next journey to the trough is made—perhaps 24 hours distant.—N. Y. Tribune.

MILKERS AND MILKING.

Six Cows to One Man Is About the Right Proportion for the Average Farm Employee.

There seems to be a great deal of discussion among the farmers in different localities nowadays in regard to the subject of good milkers. The remark that it is now almost impossible to find good milkers is quite frequently heard among dairymen. This is a great mistake, says a writer in Rural New Yorker. I thoroughly believe that there are just as good milkers in this and other localities as there ever were, if not better.

The farmer who depends on day hands for his help, as a general rule, is the one who complains most bitterly in regard to this matter. The average man who is hired by the day will not milk even if he can. Wherever or whenever I find a good month hand, one who stays on the farm continually, one who is not constantly listening for the sound of the six o'clock whistle, one who does not go to town every night, I find a good milker.

A cow should be milked as quickly as possible. A good milker can milk 12 cows an hour. The muscles of the forearm, wrist and hands of a good milker must be well developed; therefore, as a rule, women are poor milkers. They require too much time to milk a cow. The evil resulting from this practice is that the cows do not readily give down their milk. Some farmers expect a man to do too much of this work. The number of cows that a man milks should depend on the amount and nature of other labor that he performs. As a rule, I do not believe that a man should be allowed to milk more than six cows.

PRACTICAL DAIRY HINTS.

Keep the cow warm and dry. Milk with clean, dry hands as quickly as possible.

Feed clean, bright food in variety to produce good results.

Keep the cow clean by using plenty of clean, bright bedding.

Do not allow a cow to drink water you would not drink yourself.

Own and milk good cows. If you have poor cows send them to the butcher.

Treat cows quietly and kindly; excitement affects the quantity and quality of milk.

Never use or sell milk from diseased or unhealthy cows. It is dangerous even to feed it to the pigs.

The cornstalk, either shredded or in ensilage, is one of the best feeds for the cow. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of this feed are annually lost.

In freezing weather, scald can covers just before starting the milk for the creamery. The cream will not stick and freeze in them. Also cover cans.

A Definition of Weeds.

Any plant growing where it is not desired is a weed. One of the most detestable of weeds is rye in a wheat field, and yet such cases are frequent. Even two varieties of the same kind of plants should never be allowed together. If two blades of grass or stalks of corn are growing side by side and do not thrive, one of them should be removed in order to allow the other the plant food which is being taken by both. One performs the services of a weed to the other.

VALUABLE SUGGESTION.

How Farmers May Help the Country Roads Without Much Trouble or Expense.

It is easily possible for farmers to keep country roads in a much better condition than most of them are at present. The individual can afford to do road mending on the same principle that he repairs fences and buildings. "It pays me." And a land owner ought to feel as much shame, even guilt, before the general public over a mudhole that can be drained, or over a choked-up sluice along his premises as he ought over neglected cattle or a display of filth.

It is not necessary to wait for the road-working season to come. The most profitable, common sense work can be put in a little at a time, if at the right time. Drainage is the beginning and the ending of the whole matter, if roads are to be roads and not sloughs. Watering troughs and hill-side springs are common causes of standing water, yet it is a very simple matter to direct the water flowing from them in the way it should go. A stone, a loose board, a chunk of soil washed down against the end of a sluice may choke it up till it is worse than nothing. Five minutes' work would send the water rushing through its proper channel. It is not uncommon to see water following the wheel rut for rods, when a man with half an eye can also see that a mere cut through the ridge at the edge of the road would lead the water into the ditch, perhaps down a bank.

Dropping into a bad hole or a soft place a few superfluous stones now and then to keep the water out would work a double-headed blessing to all passing that way. Heaving out a few stubborn old stones from the track would work detriment to the blacksmith and wagon maker, perhaps, but a big saving to the farmer. If all such patching were thus well kept up, the yearly toll of public service would count more and more toward the good roads of which all are dreaming and talking. This view of the subject is no more than one feature of practical farming, intelligent economy, a mere looking out for number one, no matter how many others are also benefited.—Orange Judd Farmer.

CONVENIENT BARN.

It Is Fitted with Labor-Saving Methods for Feeding Horses, Cattle and Other Farm Stock.

This barn is intended for horses and cattle, and special attention is called to the convenient methods of feeding. Horses and cattle face the alleys with a partition in front of the horses which forms the back of manger. The horses are fed through small drop doors in the partition. The hay chute and feed spouts open into these alleys, thus saving many steps. Spouts from an outside bin on second floor, which bin is in center of the barn over left end of driveway, come down into alleys. Spouts from feed bins on second floor are at right of alleys; these extend to ground floor, as feed does not run well through spouts. Grain and feed are carried up by an elevator which is in the center of barn and which dumps into spouts leading to the bins.—Laurence Doolittle, in Farm and Home.

THE CHERRY TREE.

It Needs But Little Pruning, But Requires Heavy Doses of Mineral Fertilizers.

When a cherry tree gets into full bearing and is regularly picked each year, enough twigs are broken off during the harvesting of the crop to prune the trees sufficiently. But if the tree grows on low, wet ground it often runs too much to wood, the fruit either does not set or rots, because it is too much shaded by leaves, which are caused by severe root pruning and cutting out the center limbs while in leaf will sufficiently check growth, so much that the tree will both blossom fully and will also bear fruit. After the cherry tree begins bearing, the wastage of twigs broken off in harvesting the crop checks wood growth sufficiently to make the tree bear full crops thereafter. But it must be remembered that so much of the cherry is in the stone, which requires heavy doses of potash to perfect it, that if the cherry tree is not liberally supplied with potash and other mineral fertilizers it will soon begin to die. The cherry tree never fails to bloom and set fruit so long as any part of it lives. It prunes itself by letting enough of its limbs die so that what remain can produce as much and as fine fruit as they ever did. Most of the larger fruit trees stop bearing as they grow old. The cherry tree keeps on bearing so long as any part of it is alive.—American Cultivator.

GREAT RAILROAD BUSINESS.

Official Statistics Prepared by the Interstate Commerce Commission Show Many Things.

Official statistics prepared by the interstate commerce commission show that on June 30, 1898, the single track railway mileage of the United States was 156,396 miles, an increase of 1,968 over the previous year. There were 2,047 corporations, which controlled 36,234 locomotives, 33,595 passenger, and 1,248,826 freight cars. The number of employees was 874,553, or 474 for every 100 miles of road. The capitalization of this great railway interest was $10,818,554,031, or ten times the funded debt of the United States government. The railroads during the year ended June 30, 1898, carried the enormous number of 501,066,681 passengers, or seven times the entire population of the country. At the same time the roads hauled 879,006,307 tons of freight, equal to the displacement of about 75,000 battleships. The gross earnings of the railroads for the fiscal year were $1,247,325,621, or three times Uncle Sam's receipts for the same time. The net earnings were $29,332,345, or enough to pay the ordinary expenses of the government.

Yet there is another side to the picture. The railroads killed 6,859 and injured 40,882. More than one-fourth of the killed and three-fourths of the injured were employees of the roads. The figures show that of the half billion passengers carried only 221 were killed and 2,945 injured. The statistics prove that the chances of a passenger being killed on a railroad are only 1 to 2,267,270, while only one in 170,141 sustains a statistical chance of being injured. Looked at in another light an average passenger ought to travel 60,542,670 miles before he would be killed, although, as this is based on averages, he might lose his life between Randolph and Park row.

INTERESTED IN BIBLE.

Emperor of China Manifesting Great Pleasure Over Its Stories—Prays to Our God.

Rev. T. J. N. Gattrell, who for ten years has been a colporteur of the American Bible society in northern China, has returned to the United States. In his last report of the society he says: "Ever since the presentation copy of the New Testament went to the dowager empress our depository has been visited almost daily by officials of the court. They say the emperor observes 'Worship' day (Sunday), and that he frequently goes to a lonely place to pray to 'Tien Chi' (God), and that when he is thus engaged no one dares disturb him. Some time ago he purchased through our agency a large number of scientific and Scriptural books, and we hear he is delighted with some of the stories of the patriarchs, and particularly with an illustrated life of Christ, which he has ordered to be bound in velvet and to be put in a convenient place in the library. He has applied to our store for copies of books treating of the differences between the Catholic and Protestant churches."

TREATMENT OF TUBERCULOSIS.

The Paris Therapeutical society has arrived at the following conclusion as to sanitarium treatment: Considered from a disciplinary, hygienic and dietetic point of view, it is the best for tuberculosis which has yet been practiced. The best sanitarium is one where climatic advantages can be superadded. The municipal authorities of health resorts should further the erection of sanitariums for the tuberculous. Phthisical patients should not be admitted into the wards of a general hospital, and sanitariums where poor people can be treated gratuitously should be provided in the vicinity of all large towns.

COMING EXPOSITIONS.

Over 200 boards of trade and other commercial bodies are giving their hearty cooperation to the management of the National Export exposition at Philadelphia. More than 30 foreign countries have promised to send delegations.

The first copy of the handsome Pan-American Herald, published in the interests of the Pan-American exposition to be held at Buffalo in 1901, is at hand. If the exposition makes as good a showing at the start as this little magazine it will be an unqualified success.

A Frenchman, writing from Paris, says that inasmuch as the Eiffel tower is no longer a novelty, and the Ferris wheel an old story, he would like the privilege of digging a hole 3,000 feet deep on the Philadelphia exposition grounds, into which he would lower people in a basket. He writes that while the hole could not be seen at any great distance, it would be truly a novelty and attract much attention.

The music of a big exposition is commonly on too vast a scale to be especially interesting, but the musical side of the Paris exposition of 1900 will be fully justified by the production of some of those works of Berlioz which call for a colossal orchestra. Berlioz himself demanded 467 performers, and an orchestra of this size will be heard in Paris.

"Pompeii Alive" is the suggestion of an enthusiastic Italian archaeologist for a novel attraction for the Paris exhibition. He would have the forum, theater, temples and characteristic buildings represented as they were before the eruption of Vesuvius. A "Street in Pompeii," with the refreshments and amusements of the Romans of the decadence, would appeal more to the Parisians and their visitors probably.

A Profane Silence.

A story is going the rounds of a golf match between Rev. Dr. Secret and Justice Harlan of the United States supreme court. The incident occurred at Chevy Chase Golf club, one of the prominent organizations near Washington, during a meeting between these two ardent golfers. The doctor discovered that his ball teed up in tempting style for a fine brassie shot, and, with the utmost deliberation, he went through with the preliminary "waggles," and with a supreme effort—missed the ball. For fully a minute he gazed at the tantalizing sphere without uttering a word. At length Justice Harlan remarked solemnly: "Doctor, that was the most profane silence I ever listened to."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Scrofula, a Vile Inheritance.

Scrofula is the most obstinate of blood troubles, and is often the result of an inherited taint in the blood. S. S. S. is the only remedy which goes deep enough to reach Scrofula; it forces out every trace of the disease, and cures the worst cases.

My son, Charlie, was afflicted from infancy with Scrofula, and he suffered so that it was impossible to dress him for three years. His head and body were a mass of sores, and his eyesight also became affected. No treatment was spared that we thought would relieve him, but he grew worse until his condition was indeed pitiable. I had almost despaired of his ever being cured, when by the advice of a friend we gave him S. S. S. (Swift's Specific). A decided improvement was the result, and after he had taken a dozen bottles, no one who knew of his former dreadful condition would have recognized him. All the sores on his body have healed, his skin is perfectly clear and smooth, and he has been restored to perfect health.

Mrs. S. S. MARY, 360 Elm St., Macon, Ga.

For real blood troubles it is a waste of time to expect a cure from the doctors. Blood diseases are beyond their skill. Swift's Specific,

FROM THE ACORN

How a Wise Brahman Taught a Beautiful Lesson.

To an ancient, pious Brahman was a grandson born. Full of joy at the blessing which had again happened to his house, he said: "I will go out hence and thank the great spirit and father of nature, who has blessed us. Perhaps he may give me opportunity to honor him, even through one good deed."

So spoke the Brahman and went. The blossom of pure joy is gratitude and its fruit benevolence.

With the lively feeling of honoring the great and beneficent spirit, the old man stepped into the fields, and in the shade of the trees, each of his thoughts was a prayer. Still sparkled the drops of a freshly fallen shower on stalks, blossoms and leaves.

Although he had already seen the spring 90 times, nature seemed to him again made young and fairer than ever, for she grows not old to him who reveres her creator and recognizes in the figure the benevolent sculptor.

The old man set on his way forward, and on the beaten path he found an acorn. The rain had already, through its fertilizing power, sent the germ forth, and the shell burst asunder, but it could not take root on the hard, bare path. He stooped, took it up and said:

"How charming it is to be brought thus far on my way, for easily hadst thou been trodden in pieces by the foot of the wanderer or withered by the solar rays. Happy shall I be if I can here do a good work and, by deed, fulfill my inward sentiment and the aim of wise nature advance, who with each breath shows a benefit—even the smallest thankfulness is a sweet duty."

A youngster who stood behind the oak tree and who had caught up the words of the Brahman stepped forward and jeeringly smiled.

"Why smilest thou?" asked the old man.

The youngster answered, "At thy childish thought, my elder, that thou canst rejoice at having rescued the life of an acorn."

"Youngster," said the Brahman, "how art thou able to know my thoughts, since today is the first time thou hast seen me? And why dost thou jeer at the small service which I intend to perform to nature? To her is the acorn worth as much as the tree, and without this were not. Even virtue, my son, begins with the little and from this mounts upward to the great, but the nearer she approaches to the completion of the original even so much the more she herself inclines to humility and simplicity, and then to her is worth the smallest as much as the highest. Sends not Brahma, too, his ray and dew on the blade of grass as well as on the palm tree?"

Thus spoke the old man with friendly seriousness. The youngster silently withdrew himself, full of veneration. He had seen the noble old man in his dignity, and he wished to be like him, for frivolity itself must in his heart reverse virtue.

The Brahman set forward on his way to a hill which was overgrown round about with thorns. He met a peddler, who asked: "Thinkest thou that out of an acorn thou canst rear a tree for thyself? Thou wilt indeed scarcely have the joy of its shade."

The old man answered: "Must one at the planting think only on the shade of the tree and on oneself? Does nature so? My son, he who has not planted earlier than and before yesterday finds in the planting itself his motive and his joy."

He came to the hill, on the peak of which, among the thorns, he buried the acorn and covered it carefully over with earth and moss.

"Why plantest thou among thorns?" called out a herdsmen opposite to him. "Thou earnest badly for thy nursing!" "Friend," replied the Brahman, "so long as the little plant is tender and small the thorns will shelter it from raw winds and injury, and when it grows up it will work a way through for itself, for it is an oak. My son, I have obtained this of nature. The good mother considers equally the tenderness and strength of her foster children."

After the old man had completed his work he trod gayly on the way back to his homestead. As he drew near to his hut his grandsons and great-grandsons sprang toward him and asked, "Where hast thou been so long?"

But he assembled them around him and recounted all which had happened to him, and the little children caressed the old man while he spoke. The elder ones, however, hung on his lips and harkened to him.

"Oh," said the old man when he had finished, "there is certainly no place fairer than in the lap of nature, when the father loves his offspring and in the quiet circle of his family is beloved by his children. Yes, love abounding Brahma!" cried he, and glanced upward to heaven. "In the quiet circle of nature and of domestic peace stands thy holy temple!"

The new planted oak soon grew forth out of the germ and raised itself up above the thorns and became a spreading, shady tree. There died the old man, and his loved ones buried him on the hill, and whenever they saw the tree and heard its rustlings they were mindful of the life and wise sayings of the Brahman, even to the latest times, and recited from him and sought to become like him, for the word of a wise man is as a grain of corn in fruitful ground.—Boston Globe.

Imagery of the Malay Language. The study of the Malay language is commended by a writer in The Popular Science Monthly, who says it is easily learned and has much to repay for learning. It is replete with wonders and surprises, Malay, among other things, being the home of euphemism, where a spade is called anything but a spade. For instance, to die is beautifully expressed in Malay as a return to the mercy of Allah. A neighbor is one whom you permit to ascend the ladder of your cottage, and your friend is a sharer of your joys and sorrows. Interest is the flower of money, a spring is an eye of water, the sun the eye of day and a policeman all eyes. A walk is a stroll to eat the wind, a man drunk is one who rides a green horse, a coward a duck without spurs, and a flatterer is one who has sugar cane on his lips.

Turned Down. Dasherly—Suffering from misplaced confidence, are you?

De Broke—Reckon so. Anyway, J. Jones didn't seem to have it when I struck him for a ten.—Kansas City Independent.
